

ABSTRACT

A method and system for non-intrusive code coverage is described. The method includes configuring a CPU to notify an information collection module when a branch is taken, recording a branch address when the information collection module is notified of a branch taken, and storing the recorded branch addresses to determine code coverage of a target program.